

JONES LANG
LASALLE

Real value in a changing world

What makes a workplace great?

Eight principles used by high functioning organizations

High-functioning organizations understand one of the fundamental keys to success: having a workplace that not only makes the best use of space, but also uses the space appropriately and strategically.

In doing so, they create a shared culture and an environment that supports its people, accurately reflects the way people work and aligns the physical workplace with business goals.

1

A great workplace is built on collaboration.

A man in a light blue V-neck shirt stands in the center of a meeting room, smiling and holding a white piece of paper. He is addressing a group of people seated around a table. In the foreground, a woman with dark hair in a ponytail looks up at him. To the left, another man is partially visible. On the table, there is a vase of yellow flowers. The background features a whiteboard with several colorful icons and sticky notes.

2

A great workplace reflects the company's brand and is aligned with its values.

3

A great workplace provides increased choice and autonomy.

4

The image shows a modern, open-plan office. In the background, a man is riding a scooter down a hallway. In the middle ground, a man is sitting in a chair, gesturing while talking to a woman who is standing next to a large whiteboard. The whiteboard is covered in handwritten diagrams and notes. The office has a high ceiling with exposed ductwork and large windows on the left side. The cubicles are modern with red and grey panels.

A great workplace is agile.

A man in a dark blue suit and red tie is pointing his right index finger at a computer keyboard. The keyboard is semi-transparent and overlaid on the image. The keys are labeled with standard alphanumeric characters and function keys. The man's face is partially visible at the top of the frame.

5

A great workplace has the ability to adopt and integrate technology trends.

6

A great workplace understands that
“the workplace is the best place to work.”

7

A great workplace creates a quality experience for its employees.

A photograph of a modern office space. In the foreground, three people are seated on a light-colored sofa and a yellow armchair, engaged in conversation. In the background, a group of five people is seated around a white table, working on laptops. The office features large windows with blinds, a glass partition wall, and a large screen displaying a data dashboard. The ceiling has exposed ductwork and modern lighting fixtures. The overall atmosphere is professional and collaborative.

8

A great workplace integrates the three biggest items: people, technology and space.

JONES LANG
LASALLE

Real value in a changing world

Thank you

Head of Workplace Strategy, Americas
Bernice Boucher, Managing Director
+1 212 418 2619
Bernice.Boucher@am.jll.com

